MARbled MARVEL

Channel psychedelia with these large-scale ceramic tiles by Italian designer Federico Pepe, who's created graphic rugs for CC Tapis and collaborated with Patricia Urquiola for Edizioni Milano. Inspired by the use of marbled paper in book binding, the 'Araldica' range brings the beauty of hardbacks to your walls. From £129 per square metre, Cedit-Ceramiche d'Italia (ceditceramiche.it).

GEOMETRIC GEM

Marble is getting more intricate. 'Euclid', named after the Greek mathematician cited as founding geometry, is a range by New York-based designer Alison Rose for Artistic Tiles. Reminiscent of Bauhaus designs, the compositions feature stones such as Bianco Carrara and Verde Aurora. Price on application, De Ferranti (deferranti.com).

THE KINDER LUXURY

As the world becomes more aware of the benefits of plant-based diets, it's no surprise that this trend is also having an affect on the products we buy for our homes. Japanese brand Ultrafabrics' luxury alternative to leather – actually a polyurethane fabric – has just launched in the UK. It has the appearance and texture of real leather but is animal product-free. It's suitable for both exterior and interior use, but what's most striking is the variety of colours on offer. From £30 per metre (ultrafabricsinc.com).
